WILDLIFE CORNER BY KEVIN MCCORMIK

A few days before July 4th, in the late afternoon, we witnessed an epic aerial hawk battle upstream from the Honey Run Bridge. At least 5 hawks were attacking or defending a Red Tailed Hawk that had a pigeon in its talons. All of the hawks were screeching loudly, some were diving at the hawk with the pigeon, others were diving at the attackers.

When the dog-fight was over, the hawk with the pigeon landed on the ground with its prey next to the house. The hawk looked exhausted. After an hour or so, it was still sitting on the ground. I quietly walked over and observed it was clearly injured. Both eyes were shut and it was panting. I brought some water and was able to give it a drink. I carefully poured water in its open beak and it drank quite a bit.

At sunset we brought a dog crate over and coaxed in. We then put it in our garage for the night. We also contacted Bidwell Wildlife Rehabilitation. We were contacted the next morning, and the "raptor rescue specialist" came and picked the hawk up. The hawk was scheduled to go to vet the next day, and we are keeping our fingers crossed that it will heal and be released back to the canyon. We are grateful to Bidwell Rehab, and Don, the raptor specialist for giving the hawk a second chance.

Don transferring the hawk to his travel crate.
